Kami Marie Funk

Kami Marie Funk has been writing since she could hold a pen. The first stuff wasn't all that great, but what can you expect from someone who writes their letters backwards? That didn't stop her, though, not in the slightest. For the past five years, she's written every single day, hardly able to put down the pen for dinner.

She earned her Bachelor of Arts in Communications from Sonoma State University in 2015 and aims to get her Master of Arts in English sometime soon, like before the next century, preferably. In between the time she spends writing, she makes a living shelving books in the local library, daydreaming about her book being one of them someday. It'll happen, her magic 8 ball said so.

Kami has never been traditionally published, but she has had three articles appear in Rosa Roots Magazine and has self-published a novella she's mostly proud of. For eight years, she has published free short stories on archiveofourown, earning a sizable fanbase and positive reviews. So far, she's published over thirty short stories, including four series she's kept up with updating. She currently has an agent looking at her third novel, The Bridge-Jumper's Guide to the Afterlife, which was recommended by author Douglas Rees.

Kami takes writing almost as seriously as she takes getting caffeinated every morning. All she's ever wanted to do was write, which was a problem in high school when she tuned out lectures to focus on her stories. She mostly pays attention now, though. Mostly.

Kami lives in Sonoma County with her dog and one goldfish who has had one fin on the rainbow bridge for a while now. Besides writing and thinking about writing, she spends all her money on concerts and band t-shirts. Hey, she's twenty-five.
